Harrie Samaras Lectures At Lipscomb University's Institute for Conflict Management

West Chester, Pa. – Harrie Samaras recently taught a weeklong course on the “Use of ADR in Intellectual Property Cases” to graduate students enrolled in Lipscomb University’s Institute for Conflict Management.

The course explored the various ways parties resolve business disputes, focusing on disputes involving intellectual property and agreements relating to IP. Students were introduced to the basics of IP rights, how litigation and alternatives to litigation can be used to enforce and settle disputes involving such rights, and business considerations involved in resolving IP disputes.

Harrie is a frequent lecturer on legal and ADR topics to law students, business students, attorneys and business professionals. She also teaches courses on dispute resolution and related topics through Advanced Business Law Resources (<http://www.ablr.biz/home.html>).

Lipscomb University’s Institute for Conflict Management (ICM) provides academic and business specific resources to equip students, organizations and professionals with skills to minimize the costs of unresolved conflict. Growing out of the internationally recognized dispute resolution work of Professor Randy Lowry, Lipscomb University President, the ICM provides degrees, certificates, seminars and research dedicated to the advancement of conflict management disciplines.
